

Collection Agency Promotes Two Team Members to the Positions of Collection Manager

American Profit Recovery Builds Team with Two Seasoned Team Members Known for Their Diplomacy and Management Capabilities

Marlborough, MA: January 16, 2012: American Profit Recovery, a nationwide collection agency with offices in Massachusetts, Michigan and North Carolina has promoted two team members to the position of collection manager.

Bruce Beegle, a 2003 graduate of Limestone College in South Carolina and Britton Davis, a graduate of both Albion College in Michigan in 1996 and Wake Forest University School of Law will both take on the role of collection managers.

Both Davis and Beegle will take on new responsibilities include ensuring their teams are adhering to and enforcing state and federal collection laws. They will also be responsible for the training of new collectors and ensuring their understanding of the company philosophy of trying to resolve consumer's debt with diplomacy. They will both continue to manage their own accounts and in addition, they will have the responsibility of making sure their teams are performing to their best ability and following company and industry guidelines.

“Our collectors not only have a responsibility to secure past due debt for our clients but they also need to do it in a diplomatic fashion,” states Jeff DiMatteo a partner at American Profit Recovery. “Both Bruce and Brit understand this fully and they are the perfect team members to bring our diplomatic collections and their teams to the next level.”

Davis developed professional skills while working as a Regional Office Manager at Brock & Scott, the largest real estate firm in North Carolina where he managed sales and worked to increase their customer base. Before his time there Davis worked at Currie, Kendall, Polasky & Meisel, another Michigan company and a regional law firm where he researched and analyzed a broad range of legal issues.

Before coming to American Profit Recovery, Beegle worked as a collector and later an assistant manager at Credit Management Services from 2004 to 2007. Before that, he held the position of manager at Skate-N-Stuff from 1999-2003.
